Governor

November 22, 2008

Greetings:

On behalf of the citizens of the State of Colorado, it is my pleasure to welcome you to the dedication ceremony for Habitat for Humanity's 1000th home in Colorado.

For the past 30 years, Habitat for Humanity has been building safe, affordable homes for thousands of people across the state. The commitment to helping people is inspiring and provides a unique opportunity for citizens to volunteer their energy into a worthy cause. The countless hours of time that organizers, architects, and volunteers have devoted to Habitat for Humanity has made a lasting impact on those who benefited from the homes.

The "There's No Place Like Home" campaign to build another 1000 homes all across Colorado is a noble ambition that will continue to serve the citizens of this state well.

Congratulations once again on your 1000th home. You have my best wishes now and in the future.

Sincerely,

Bill Ritter, Jr.
Governor
