

Habitat for Humanity of Metro Denver

1000th Home Campaign – Profiles

Connie Curtis

Connie Curtis joined Habitat for Humanity of Metro Denver as the Family Service Coordinator in early 1991. At that time there were only three employees and a small army of volunteers working to build 8 decent and affordable homes that year. Since then Connie has seen some changes throughout the local affiliate – including a larger staff and a much higher number of houses built each year. Although some things have changed, the fundamentals of the organization have stayed the same. Habitat for Humanity is still a community-based organization that is successful through the support of local volunteers, donors and partner families.

Melanie Davis

When Melanie and Todd Davis first applied to Habitat for Humanity of Metro Denver, they were living with their two young children in one bedroom of Melanie's mother's house. Since they moved into their Habitat home in 2006, their lives have dramatically changed for the better. Throughout Melanie's partnership with Habitat, she became inspired to go back to school so that she could work for an organization that helps people and makes a positive difference in the community. Melanie will be graduating summa cum laude this December with a bachelors degree in Communication Theory. Melanie has already applied to grad school and is proud to show her children that through hard work and determination, you can make your dreams come true.